When the Crops Promise Well

Stocks are low; money is tight; public expenditures are enormous and taxation is pretty high and going higher. But never mind! The crops promise well.—Life.

That is the old story. The farmer is expected to pull everybody else out of the hole. If the speculators have been guessing wrong, all they have to do is to hang on until the crops are harvested. If the federal, state and municipal taxes are too high on account of extravagance, keep a stiff upper lip until the wheat is harvested and the apples picked, and then everything will be serene. If the crops are good the country is safe. Because the crops promise well everybody can cheer up except the man who produces the crops. Apparently good crops are for the benefit of the broker, the money lender and the politician. Even Life, which usually is with the under dog, falls easily into the common way of thinking that the farmer is only a part of the arrangement of a beneficent Providence for feeding and clothing the rest of us. He may keep a few of the culls—just enough to feed himself and buy himself a pair of overalls. If he has worked hard and has had good luck, his bumper crop is to boost stocks, loosen up the money market, pay off the government's obligations, ease us of our taxes and help us issue more bonds. The farmer is the goat.

Life spoke the truth, but, we imagine, without knowing that it was doing so. Ever since corn was planted in the land of Egypt and Neolithic man tended cattle, the farmer has been feeding the rest of the world and getting little for it more than board and lodging—the latter often "under the wide and starry sky" until he died of premature old age and rheumatism.

It is meant that he has been getting a relatively small share of what he produces which is about nine billion dollars a year now in this country alone; but he also numbers more than six millions and is gaining ground and growing in importance. He is slowly learning the advantages of co-operation, and when he has fully learned how to do "business" as that term is understood by those whom Life bids cheer up because crops promise well, he will have a garage full of automobiles on every farm instead of showing here and there one of last year's models. And when he realizes that he holds the whip hand because he controls every man's bread and butter, he will begin to get proper returns on his investment in land, his patient development of the soil and his hard labor.

The farmer's greatest handicap today lies in the waste and cost of getting his crop to the dinner table of the consumer. How to eliminate that waste and keep the cost in the pocket of the producer where it belongs is the problem before the economist and the professor of efficiency. As soon as something in that direction is done and the farmer gets what is coming to him, he also may cheer up when crops promise well, and then it may occur to Life that he should be the first instead of the last to be benefitted.

Will Not Suffice

"I cannot weep over the resignation of a Republican official," is the reply Attorney General McReynolds is credited in the Washington dispatches with making to United States Attorney McNab's resignation and the sensational allegations with which it is accompanied.

The attorney general is young in a cabinet position, too young perhaps to know that this answer will not suffice. A more experienced head would remember that another American once said, "The public be damned!"

There may be extenuating circumstances in the Diggs-Caminetti case, but defense must be made in open court. An aroused public opinion will not permit the guilt or innocence of the accused to be determined at any star chamber inquiry in Washington. Mr. McNab took the only course an honest man could pursue, and the attorney general may discover that sneering reference to Mr. McNab's political faith will not be accepted in lieu of a full explanation of his attitude in this case. Some of us remember that Mr. McReynolds himself served as a United States attorney through the last two republican administrations.

Goldfield with pride announces it will celebrate the Fourth in the usual Goldfield way. Which is just about one ounce.

Tonopah may be a little bit slow at the start but when it comes to arranging a Fourth of July celebration this city is there—thanks to the ladies.

Perhaps Senator Pittman believes that the voters of this state will forget about his stand on free wool six years hence when his term expires and he asks for re-election.

AUTO CHEMICAL FIRE TRUCK IS SENT TO BISHOP

UP TO DATE FIRE WAGON IS PURCHASED BY THE CALIFORNIA TOWN.

Bishop has purchased an auto chemical fire wagon and the vehicle is now being driven overland to its destination. The wagon was exhibited at Reno and Carson and it is probable that both cities will follow suit in the near future and make a like purchase. An auto chemical has long been advocated for Tonopah but as yet no movement has been undertaken toward securing such a modern fire fighting device. Concerning the passage of the truck through Carson the News has the following:

This afternoon a fine auto chemical fire engine passed through this town on the way to Bishop, where it will be used for fire fighting purposes. It is a combination chemical and fire care, with accommodations for the crew, hose and ladders. It is one of the most complete arrangements so far brought through.

The machine was run along the main street, where it attracted a lot of attention, as this city is sadly in need of just such an affair. With an equipment of this character many a fire can be handled that does not require the heavier engines and hose. It is a hurry up wagon and will deliver the goods. Bishop is showing the right kind of spirit in taking such an advanced step in fire fighting equipment.

ARE INDIGNANT.

Raages of Reno and Nevada, who are foreign population, are highly indignant over the remarks of Senator Key Pittman as set forth in a Gazette editorial of June 18, expressing the estimate which the senator holds of the sheep industry, and particularly the men from sunny Spain and southern France who are employed in varying capacities in sheep raising.—Gazette.

DICTIONARY IS USED TO WRITE UP WEDDING

When U. M. Harwood and Miss Grave Gullfoll of Rochester invited Frank Reber to their wedding, they little thought that he would perpetrate anything like the following in his National Miner.

"May their happiness be complete and full of cherishable response as to cause recognition at the end of a dozen years of happy life the joy comes with having a dozen wholesome children, a saintly response of the biblical injunction of multiply and bear results for the sake of perpetuating the race and improving the standard thereof. Surely Mr. and Mrs. Harwood have all the intellectual and physical conjunctments to achieve so happy and so biblical a mission."

It's of exceptional value at the price, it's sure to be advertised in the Bonanza, else the merchant would be hopelessly unprogressive.

GETTING GRAY? USE SAGE TEA TO RESTORE NATURAL COLOR OF HAIR

Says Sage and Sulphur Darkens Hair Beautifully and Ends Dandruff.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair, says a well known local pharmacist. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and even today this simple preparation has no equal. Millions of women and men too, who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive use only Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Nowadays we are not bothered with the task of gathering the sage leaves and the messy mixing at home. Simply ask any drug store
